work to do

"Public Property has a sound that is full-tilt reggae even though they don't try to sing in fake patois and write original material that actually sounds original." -The Beat Magazine

Much has been said about Public Property's Midwest origins as a white reggae band hailing from Iowa City, IA. After three albums, 3 years, and hundreds of gigs, the group no longer need defend itself from sceptics or critics who believe reggae is one color and comes from one place. Add female vocalists, a ukulele, and lyrics as controversial as Bob Marley himself, it's no wonder this band has risen so quickly in the U.S. reggae and jam scenes as one of the top nationally touring reggae acts. You'd be hard pressed to find a more confrontational and outspoken band that sounds this fun. Of the people, by the people, and for all the people, Public Property will spread its message across the country in 2009, touring throughout the Midwest and Colorado and stopping at several festivals along the way.

HIGHLIGHTS

- The recording features guest appearances by "Toots" Hibbert (Toots and the Maytals) on the title track (Work To Do) and Elliot Martin (John Brown's Body) on "Fight for Your Life".
- Performed at the 10,000 Lakes Festival in Minnesota (Dave Matthews headlining), one of the largest outdoor festivals in the country. Also opening for Toots and the Maytals and The Wailers on a string of dates throughout the country, this summer.
- National tour ongoing to promote Work To Do.
- National publicity being handled by Fly On The Wall Media.
